

Tom brings more than 20 years of extensive experience in security. He previously held the position of Deputy Director of Security at the BBC, where he effectively managed a range of high-profile events, including protests and Comic Relief.

After transitioning to the healthcare sector, Tom became the National Head of Healthcare Security, overseeing security operations for multiple NHS trusts across the country.

His dedication and leadership in this specialised area have garnered him significant accolades, including the Manager of the Year in the Outstanding Security Performance Awards in 2023 and the British Security Industry Association Awards in 2024.